Knowledge works need both autonomy and accountability

I am very happy to learn that the next issue of "TU-Newsletter" is now ready for publication. It is gratifying because the appearance of the issue is likely to coincide with the Xth Convocation of our University being held on 10 February 2012. Good Coincidence!

While the University is busy with the preparations for the annual management event "SAMPARK" as well as the Xth Convocation. Institutions of Higher Education are all busy in making the XIIth Plan proposals and roadmaps of activity for the next five years (01 April 2012 to 31 March 2017). These are important exercise especially in view of an anticipated hike in the XIIth Plan budget allocation for the higher education (HE) sector by four or five times compared to the XIth Plan. In addition, the Hon'ble Prime Minister seems to be considering the possibility of allocating 2% of GDP for higher education and research in order to enable us catch up with the expected outcome during XIIth Plan period. HE institutions (HEIs) have also to work seriously towards enhancement of Gross Enrolment Ratio (GER) in line with the national target.

Notwithstanding the above, one of the major responsibilities of HEIs is to produce employable human resource equipped with high level of aptitude, honest and affirmative attitude, and desirable skill. To this end, due attention of the stakeholders is drawn. While targeting excellence, the issue of inclusive development requires priority. A lot is also talked about Capacity Building (CB). This is indeed and important matter to be taken into reckoning. While dealing with the issue of CB one needs to apply due diligence because a single solution is not the answer.

Friends, there appears to be a basket full of issues requiring intellectuals involvement in working out real world solutions. The silver lining, however, is that every problem has a solution provided we want to solve.

Wish all readers a Happy New Year.

Editoria

This issue of the Tezpur University Newsletter does not have one of our (so far) regular features: the publications page. There are two reasons why we have decided to dispense with this feature. First, with the increase in the number of faculty publications, it has become difficult to incorporate all noteworthy publications in the very limited space we have. The other reason for dropping the publication page is that it gives us more space to cover University events. For a comprehensive list of faculty publications we refer our readers to Tezpur University's Annual Reports.

The most noteworthy event to have occurred in our part of the world during the period covered by this Newsletter was the sad demise of Dr Bhupen Hazarika on 5 November, 2011. Though Dr Hazarika is no longer with us we have his immortal songs, among which should count the Tezpur University anthem which he composed in 1994. Elsewhere in the Newsletter, we recall the musical legend's connection with our University.

This issue limits itself to the period of the autumn semester (August to December 2011). However, we have also covered events that occurred in January 2012.

Dr Sharvani Biswas of the Dept of English and Foreign Languages has recently joined our editorial team. We welcome Dr Biswas and look forward to working with her.
