Our life has taken an unprecedented turn in 2020, where we all were thrown into an existential crisis. However, things are slowly and surely starting to look normal and better. Now students can look forward to coming back to classes, attending lessons, and gradually getting back to normal routine life. In the meantime it is best to find different ways to keep our students engaged both inside and outside the classroom. When it comes to reshaping the future of our classroom we have to bring in a different mindset and attitude and one such idea could be blended pedagogy.

Blended pedagogy mechanism, which is also called the “phygital”, will be the way of the future, whether we like it or not. But the issue of serious concern here is our relationship with digital learning which has been always under strain and sometimes under stress due to the lack of access and connectivity. So we are here today to discuss and share our experience of learning and teaching during the last two years of pandemic and the changes we might expect in our classrooms. Hence, a one day workshop on “Pandemic and Classroom Teaching: Reshaping the Future” will be organized by the Department of English, Tezpur University, on 22 March 2022.
