INTRODUCTION

Several state and central universities have designed and developed courses/papers on rural community engagement particularly in selected streams like education, communication, social work and other related areas of rural studies. The duration of these courses/papers varies from six months to two years. As these courses are newly introduced, their transaction requires capacity building of the faculty concerned. It is in this context faculty development programme has been proposed to include both class room training and field exposure.

Concept note

The FDP is designed for 5 days with two days of field engagement. It would enable the faculty members with varied backgrounds to transact this course in the B Ed/M Ed Colleges and Universities.

Objectives of the FDP:

1. To understand the historical perspective of local community engagement, work education, experiential learning and Nai Talim practice in India.
2. To study and understand the changing profile of local economy, polity and community in Rural India.
3. To study rural education and infrastructure needs and align them with the education programmes.
4. To understand the new village technology interface in terms of information, participatory processes, mainstream and alternative technologies in agriculture, rural livelihoods and industries and communication for promoting student-community participative learning.
5. To provide practical opportunities for students for participation in community mobilization, service engagement and empowerment activities along with trained resident community volunteers.
6. To promote preparation and implementation of community engagement and work education plan for identified, mutually agreed and prioritized aspects.

Target Audience:

Faculty from university and colleges working in the department of education.
