About the Programme:

In the rapidly evolving landscape of higher education, academic writing and scholarly publication have become essential competencies for research scholars and faculty members. High-quality research output, ethical publishing practices, and effective dissemination of knowledge are central to academic excellence and institutional growth. However, many early-career researchers and aspiring academicians face challenges in research design, academic writing, publication processes, and navigating ethical issues such as plagiarism and predatory journals.

As a part of its ambitious mission to enhance the professional competencies of those associated with the higher education sector, the Centre for Professional Development and Training (CPDT) is organizing an online weeklong Capacity Building/Professional Development Program on Academic Writing and Publication during 19-25 June 2026 to cover various aspects of academic writing and publication for research scholars, teaching aspirants, young faculty and other members of NEIs.

The programme will be managed through ILMS online platform. Designed to be a partially learner-paced programme, it will have two live technical sessions each day besides pre-recorded video lectures and activities. The participants will be able to watch a number of pre-recorded videos in the ILMS as per their convenience and complete the given assignments. The detailed guidelines will be shared with the participants after registration.
